

Champagne and Blush = Wedding Lush

Written by Amina Michele

This color combo is hitting it big this Fall. The regality of muted gold tones lends a sense of tradition, while blush tones and pale pinks offer romance. Put the two colors together and you have Fall wedding colors 2012.

Elyse Hall Photography

Erica Velasco Photography

If your wedding plans are underway you can certainly incorporate some of these tones in other events you may be having such as a bridal shower or a bride's luncheon the day before your wedding.

Champagne and Blush = Wedding Lush

Written by Amina Michele

Elyse Hall Photography

If you're going with traditional color tones like ivory, cream, white with a metallic such as gold or silver, then you can incorporate blush in a softer way by adding a bit of texture such as a soft blush colored lace to paper products like your escort cards, place cards or even table numbers. A hint of color to your tablescape will add dimension to your already chosen traditional palette. Even personal flowers could be gorgeous with a blush colored satin or lace ribbon on your bridesmaid's bouquet handles.

Elyse Hall Photography

Stephanie Fay Photography

If you haven't started planning then choosing these color tones is a great beginning to a romantic evening. These colors allow you to do fun things like bringing in unique lighting changes such as going from amber uplighting (which reflect a champagne color tone) on the walls to pink uplighting when the party is getting started. Another beauty of this palette is that champagne and blush really compliment candles throughout the room reflecting the glow you love about romantic dinner lighting.

Champagne and Blush = Wedding Lush

Written by Amina Michele

Erica Velasco Photography

Where ever you are in the planning process – or whatever season you are getting married, incorporating these colors in Fall, Spring, or even Summer will create an ambiance your guests are sure to never forget.

XO Stay Classic!

