Date night dating: getting dolled up in new clothes, new shoes, and having your hair blown. Starting the night at 5pm for pre-dinner cocktails at a swanky bar, transitioning to a 5-course gourmet dinner, and topping things off at a cool lounge past midnight— all without smudging your make-up.

Date night married: wearing a go-to LBD that hides the honeymoon pudginess, opting for a budget friendly dinner and bottle of wine, and heading home in time for SNL.

Date night married with young children: sleeping in the same bed after a night of not bickering.

Yes, kids change things. Don't get me wrong, many of us still strive to have that picture perfect cookie cutter husband-wife social life, but the truth is, it's damn tough.

So if you're planning on doing V-Day on your couch, indulge in cute PJs, pour some red wine, and pop some popcorn— Redbox recently released some fun V-Day stats for the national day of love.

Based on the survey, the movie rental hub found the following to be the best date night movies of all time. And the results... kinda surprising. Here's the list of the top 10.

- Beauty and the Beast
- Breakfast at Tiffany's
- Brokeback Mountain
- Casablanca
- Gone with the Wind
- Jerry Maguire
- Pretty Woman
- Sleepless in Seattle
- The English Patient

Shocked? Yeah, me too.

Here are more findings.

To cap things off, Redbox has provided a list of the most romantic cities in the country. And Scottsdale's not on it— go figure. But if you're looking for a little romance, you might want to head to Fargo.
