Just as flowers can arise from ashes, in the midst of the economic recession, a business can develop and flourish.

“We had grandmothers from Sun City opening the little 3x3in. ad clippings from the newspapers for our kitchen sets. It was then when we knew that we were on to something,” said Stephen Klassen while reminiscing on the start of Cabinet Solutions USA.

An unexpected and unplanned business venture during the heat of the recession is now its own thriving stand-alone entity that has continued to serve the needs of the valley for almost 5-years.

Cabinet Solutions USA, a cabinet and kitchen design retailer in the Scottsdale Airpark, started with just an idea that Stephen Klassen of Affinity Kitchens and his trade partners brainstormed to help improve business in 2009. That on-point idea was a 10x10 kitchen package for $7,000 that included appliances, cabinets, granite, and installation all in one. By March of 2010, Cabinet Solutions USA had sold enough kitchen packages to open a dedicated showroom, and the rest is history.

But, how did Cabinet Solutions USA sustain its success? What makes it so unique?
