

Daily Buzz- Cake Pops

Written by Claire Perkins

Tuesday, 30 June 2009 11:15 - Last Updated Tuesday, 30 June 2009 14:13

You'll never believe this cake.

Or...cakelets? cake pops? cakecicles?

We recently tried a recipe from the Bakerella blog, and never has a baked good brought into the office been devoured like these little guys. Here's a quick version version of how to make them.

- Crumble an entire 9x13 cake (made from a mix, of course) into a bowl
- Mixing in a tub of frosting by hand, creating a dough-like consistency
- Rolling into 1-inch balls and freeze (lollipop sticks are optional. If you want to use, insert before freezing.)
- Dip each ball into melted white chocolate, cover with sprinkles, let harden

Trust us.

For more thorough instructions, visit Bakerella here.