Kathy Shayna Shocket has an inside view of the stories that make headlines.

Check out its unique celebrity lifestyle and PHOTOS.

It's the most expensive home in Arizona and if it sells for the asking price of $35 million - it will set a state record. The photos speak for themselves that this 12- acre dream is more than a mansion. It's a PALACE.

The 31,000 square-foot main house itself boasts an indoor basketball court with an electric scoreboard and skybox, two elevators, and a hair salon.

This marble bathroom is one of 20 baths. Imagine coming home through the private gates into this paradise and relaxing in a bubble bath in the marble tub.

In fact, located with the mountain views of posh Paradise Valley (the Beverly Hills of the Phoenix area) - the home was named Villa Paradiso by owner Robert Sussman, President of a New York hedge fund company. He built this unique PALACE from 2000- 2005.

The home theater has its own lobby. There's also an art gallery which runs the length of the home. In addition to the maid's quarters, 12 garage spaces and 5 car ports, there's a 3 bedroom guest house with its own pool.

Upstairs, the master wing and secondary bedroom wing are connected by a stairway bridge. Catherine Jacobson of Walt Danley Realty has the listing with global support by Christies International.
