

Las Vegas Resorts Reveal Exciting Changes

Written by Kirstina Bolton

We know, we know, whatever happens in Vegas stays in Vegas, but this is too good to keep quiet. Get ready for some sweet deals and all-you-can-eat eye candy as two iconic hotels, the Flamingo and Tropicana Las Vegas, reveal exciting upgrades suitable for high-rollers.

The Flamingo has announced plans to refurbish 2,307 hotel rooms, transforming them into stylish and contemporary luxury destinations. These new rooms combine the luxury of high-class appeal with chaise lounges, flat-screen plasma televisions, ultra-soft pillow-top mattresses, plush linens, faux fur throws and, of course, the brand's signature Flamingo pink and warm, wood-toned furnishings throughout. Five hundred of these new-and-improved rooms will be available Jan. 2, beginning at $85 per night, while plans to complete approximately 100 rooms every 11 days are underway. www.flamingolasvegas.com.

Just down the strip, revel in the new iCandy Burlesque at the Tropicana Las Vegas. This one-of-a-kind, sexy new experience sweeps audiences on a wild ride, featuring sultry performances, music and stunning costumes. iCandy Burlesque beauties perform on and off stage to sexy songs like "Lady Marmalade," while platform dancers and stilt walkers entertain throughout the night. Six table games also feature iCandy Burlesue dealers in risqué clothing, iCandy cocktails, special guest Djs and a Party Pit. There's sure to be much eye candy at this place. www.troplv.com.
