

Rincon Market- A True Tucson Gem

Written by Ashley Pearlstein

Rincon Market, owned by Ron and Kelly Abbott, has been serving the Tucson community since 1926. Located near downtown Tucson and the University of Arizona, Rincon is convenient and delicious. With fresh fish, produce, meat, a salad bar, and meals to go, Rincon is a one-stop shop for all healthy dietary needs.

At a glance, the splendor of Rincon is unseen, but when customers enter the market, a variety of healthy eats await them. Rincon's salad bar is a popular stop for students and workers on their lunch break. Featuring fresh salad toppings from ham and turkey to ripe tomatoes to mushrooms and broccoli to hard-boiled eggs, Rincon has it all. Customers are encouraged to top their salads with all the best, fresh ingredients offered at Rincon. When finished, guests can top their salads with dressing, close it up, and weigh it at the cashier. The cashier's station offers an array of beverages including coffee, ice tea, soda and juices to go along with lunch.

For breakfast, Rincon features a full on breakfast bar that is ever changing. Made to order omelets, Belgian Waffles, and Eggs Benedict on Sunday are just a few features of the breakfast menu. For a quick breakfast, customers can grab coffee and one of Rincon's fresh baked pastries, or some fruit from the market.

But wait, there's more! Rincon's main function is as a market. The market features a variety of seasonal produce that is guaranteed fresh. Rincon takes pride in its fresh fish, with daily deliveries and Next Day Air from Hawaii to ensure its high quality. Rincon also offers an abundance of kosher food products including kosher groceries, Rubashkins Glatt Kosher meats, kosher wines, and holiday specialties.

Rincon also offers breakfast, lunch, dinner, meeting room, appetizer, and wedding menus for catering purposes. Give your next event a little healthy flair with some of Rincon's affordable and delicious catering menus.
