10 Things to do in Phoenix This Weekend

From once-in-a-lifetime Broadway plays to sensational cuisine to a rendezvous with professional athletes, this weekend has something in store for everyone in need of a little escape from reality. So pick your faves and head to the best events the Valley has to offer this weekend, April 20-22.

Forbidden Broadway's Greatest Hits

Beginning Thursday, April 19, and lasting through Sunday, April 22, this off-Broadway hit musical takes the stage at the Mesa Arts Center. This extremely comical show features the most memorable songs from Broadway favorites while adding a twist to the lyrics. Songs include "WICKED- Defying Subtlety," "LES MIS- On My Phone," and "RENT- Rant/Seasons of Hype." Tickets start at $28. To purchase tickets, click here.

Nirvana Culinary Festival at Sanctuary on Camelback

Nirvana, Sanctuary on Camelback's culinary festival, returns this year, from April 19 to 22, and will include a lineup of culinary master talents from all over the globe. This food and beverage extravaganza features star chefs along with the resort's own Executive Chef Beau MacMillan. Throughout the weekend, you will have the opportunity to enjoy many industry celebrity sightings, accompanied by numerous opportunities for food that will overly satisfy your taste buds. Luckily for people who came last year, some of the 2017 favorite festivities will be back this year, like Flutes & Coops (formerly known as Birds & Bubbles) and Best of the West, though event-goers can expect new additions, as well.

The Phoenix Improv Festival at the Herberger Theater

This Friday, April 20, marks the start of The Phoenix Improv Festival. This festival is known to serve a platter of whits and laughs while showing off the creative nature from some of the nation's funniest folks. So if you are a fan of Saturday Night Live and are in need to laugh uncontrollably, then head over to the Herberger Theater for a night of unscripted and perfectly imperfect improvisation.

The Color Purple at ASU Gammage

Come out and watch the 2016 Tony Award winner for Best Musical Revival, "The Color Purple." This soul-raising montage of jazz, gospel, ragtime and blues is the perfect weekend event. So head to ASU Gammage and enjoy the music that gives a new spirit to the Pulitzer Prize-winning story about a young woman's journey to love and triumph in the American South.
