

Fabulosity's One-Year Anniversary

Written by Written by Corbin Chamberlin

Thursday, 01 July 2010 01:00 - Last Updated Thursday, 01 July 2010 09:07

Growing up as a flamboyant fashionista who's every move was to snatch up sparkly brooches, break the rules of fashion and live a life of decadence, it was only natural for me to crave my own column.

A column which would cover the most divine and eccentric designers, socialites and tastemakers in all of the land. I got my wish one year ago, when Arizona Foothills Magazine approached me with "Fabulosity"—my childhood dream had come true! A column of my own. Since the first article I wrote, every moment has been serendipitous. Caped, cloaked and surely sparkling, I have observed every moment of Arizona's local fashion scene and have done so with immense joy. May it be lunches with Oscar de la Renta or collection previews with Arizona native, designer Joy Li, it has been a breathtaking journalistic journey. My readers have titled me the "Ambassador of Elegance," and I humbly accept this appellation. I would not be a columnist or ambassador of anything if it were not for a few people supporting me especially my publisher, Michael Dee. Michael has been a cheerleader, father figure and talent incubator while I have written for AZFoothills.com. Obviously, I adore and cherish my readers and "Fabulosity" addicts. So I thank you all for the past year; it has been blissful. Keep reading my fashionable adventures, and I promise not to disappoint.