The Board of Directors of Sedona Jazz on the Rocks has made a difficult decision not to hold a festival in the fall of 2012. The current economic environment that is challenging all of us – was a key driver in the decision to cancel this year. Non-profits are struggling across the country and we felt it was more productive to gear up for a successful festival in 2013 when the economy should be healthier.

We already have taken significant steps to weather the financial storm, including reducing our administrative costs by closing the office and suspending phone service and webpage.

We deeply appreciate your support for Sedona Jazz on the Rocks and our mission to preserve jazz for future generations through education and performance programs. We fully expect to continue those efforts.

We will announce the date for 2013 in the next few months.
