

ASU Grad Wins Prestigious Award

Written by Melissa Larsen

Thursday, 04 April 2013 08:53 - Last Updated Thursday, 04 April 2013 09:05

AZFoothills.com would like to congratulate Lauren Gilger, a 2011 graduate of Arizona State University's Cronkite School, who just won a prestigious George Foster Peabody Award. Gilger was acknowledged for an ABC15 investigative series exposing a deadly acceleration defect in Ford Escapes that led to a massive recall of the SUVs. The Peabody was one of only four given this year to local U.S. news stations and just the third won by a Phoenix station in more than 20 years.

During her time at ASU, Gilger was a lead reporter on Cronkite NewsWatch. She was part of a reporting team that produced in-depth stories along the Dominican Republic-Haiti border, earning a Robert F. Kennedy Journalism Award. And she was a fellow in the Carnegie-Knight News21 program, spending a summer traveling back and forth to the U.S.-Mexican border to produce stories on the plight of immigrant women caught in deportation limbo. Gilger was also named Outstanding Graduate Student at the May 2011 graduation ceremonies.

ASU Grad Wins Prestigious Award

Written by Melissa Larsen

Thursday, 04 April 2013 08:53 - Last Updated Thursday, 04 April 2013 09:05
