

Familiar Face Back at Real Estate Firm

Written by Melissa Larsen

Monday, 20 May 2013 12:15 - Last Updated Monday, 20 May 2013 12:23

Phoenix-based Hines, international real estate firm, has announced the return of Christopher "Chris" Anderson as the firm's managing director to oversee Hines' operations in Arizona and New Mexico. Anderson will lead all operations including new business, development, property management and asset management. From 2006 to present, Anderson served as vice president of development for Forest City Enterprises, Inc. in Albuquerque. Prior to that--starting in 2000--he was a senior project manager for Hines. He was involved in the development of 24th at Camelback I in Phoenix; the development management of the now Jobing.com Arena; and the land acquisition for the Scottsdale Corporate Center. Welcome back and congrats on your new position!