Time to check out MoW, The Museum of Walking, which was founded in early 2014 by two Local artists Angela Ellsworth and Steven J. Yazzie. According to the museum's mission "MoW is an educational resource center committed to the advancement of walking as an art practice. MoW houses a small-but-mighty archive and library comprised of walking related material engaging disciplines of art, science, philosophy, health, activism, and cartography. Through workshops, exhibitions, guest speakers, and site-specific projects MoW fosters relationships between people, land, action and site."

The founding members are veteran artists with an extensive background and experience with both tradition and contemporary arts that both living and working here in Arizona. Want to learn more about these two talented artists then check out there websites now Angela Ellsworth and Steven J. Yazzie.

Scottsdale Public Art has partnered with MoW and its founding members Ellsworth and Yazzie in what they refer to as "an ongoing creative residency, Angela and Steven are activating the Livery Studio Space currently being managed by Scottsdale Public Art as a satellite site for the museum. The Livery Studio Space located at 3802 N. Brown Avenue, Scottsdale 85251. During this time, the space will function as a gathering space for discussion, walking-related projects, and other events that interface with the public."
