

3 Must See Public Arts in Tempe...

Written by Nicole Royse

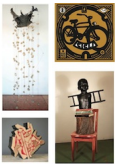

Monday, 05 January 2015 01:31 - Last Updated Wednesday, 07 January 2015 21:41

Tempe has an incredible selection of public arts, galleries and museums that you need to check out now!

First be sure to stop by and see this brilliant artwork "Seen" by Kristin Bauer! This striking artwork features a beautiful image of a classic movie star and the text "Look Up And See Me", which was selected for influx Cycle 5 and installed in December. Her artwork utilizes a variety of media including assemblages, painting, neon, and text. Bauer created this site specific public art installation to engage the community and activate a busy area in downtown Tempe. For more information about Tempe based artist, Kristin Bauer: <http://kristinbauerart.com>.

Just adjacent to this installation is the Tempe Post Office Gallery currently featuring "Maker", which explores the role of artist as a scholar, scientist, entrepreneur and inventor. This exhibition highlights four local artists Jake Early, Jeff Falk, Christine Cassano, and Mitch Fry. These installations showcase artists as makers, producing work that is intricately detailed and demonstrate an innovative use of materials and creative ideas. This exhibition will be on view until April 2, 2015. The Tempe Post Office Gallery is located at 500 S. Mill Ave, and is curated by Tempe Public Arts, for more information about this exhibition please visit Tempe Post Office Gallery.

Finally it's time to head to the Tempe Center For The Arts, which is currently exhibiting the "TCA Biennial: Copper" coinciding with their seven-year anniversary featuring works on copper, art made of copper and artists inspired by copper, a tradition for seventh anniversaries. A panel of nationally recognized artists, curators and community members selected 22 Arizona artists from a wide array of visual art traditions, including bronze casting, painting, ceramics, etching, quilt making and jewelry. Copper is an important symbol and has played a significant role in Arizona history.

Copper is an important medium and this "TCA Biennial: Copper" exhibition celebrates this while showcasing a wonderful selection of artwork from traditional to contemporary. This show will be on view through January 31, 2015. Feel free to visit there website for more details about the exhibition, gallery, or special events: Tempe Center For The Arts...