

Bridal Accessories - Dressing Yourself in Jewels

Written by By Rachel Troyan, Associate Planner for Outstanding Occasions
Wednesday, 31 August 2011 13:11 - Last Updated Wednesday, 31 August 2011 13:31

As the saying goes, diamonds are a girl's best friend, but unlike celebrities, not every bride can afford to be draped in diamonds on her wedding day. Here are a few great pieces brides can accessorize their dazzling dress with on their big day without breaking the bank.

These necklaces were made for the bride who loves glitz! From Nordstrom, these necklaces feature glittering strands of rhinestones, braided together to create decadent shine, which will only add to your wedding day sparkle.

For the bride looking to accessorize with a more simplistic necklace, these two gold options from Kate Spade are perfect! From the sweet I Do message to the dainty bow, these necklaces are sure to have your guests swooning.

Some brides dream of adding a little color to their wedding day ensemble. Anthropologie offers an array of colorful and exquisite necklaces that would be a perfect addition that could be worn long after your special day.

When it comes to their wedding day, some brides crave to add a bit of drama to their look. These two statement necklaces from Neiman Marcus give just that.

When creating your overall wedding day look, have fun with it, but stay true to your style and the look you have always envisioned. No matter what, you will be a dazzling bride sparkling with love.

Outstanding Occasions

On the most important day of your life, you don't want to be scrambling for phone numbers or running around with flowers. Heather Crabtree and Jennifer Thinnies with Outstanding Occasions have loads of experience and can create custom packages for you- whether you are looking for day-of coordinating or genius, creative ideas. www.outstanding-occasions.com