As Nicholas's second birthday draws near, I can't help but mentally revisit our adventure in pregnancy. I can't believe my thriving, sweet, snuggly, active, beautiful little boy was born a four pound little doll--skin and bones, and completely perfect. I look at my toddler--now a big brother--and wonder where my baby went, but at the same time, am in awe at the independent, strong-willed little man he is becoming.

Nicholas was born six weeks early due to my pregnancy condition called Placenta Previa. Thankfully, he arrived a trooper and a fighter and only had to spend 7 nights in the NICU.

I wanted to share this very special All Things Mama TV video with you--an episode featuring my gyno, Dr. JulieAnn Heathcott of Scottsdale's Arizona Women's Care. She was the "rational" side of our bumpy pregnancy and helped keep me cool and calm throughout my journey to mommyhood.

Thanks for watching!
