They have conquered the food industry. Now, they're taking on the...nail industry. Longtime CEO of P.F. Chang's, his wife, another P.F. Chang's veteran, and Lauren Bailey of Upward Projects (the group behind Postino, Joyride Taco House, Windsor and more) have opened the first franchise location of PROSE. Located at Shea and Scottsdale Roads, PROSE is poised to change the face of the nail industry.

In addition to giving clients incredible-looking manis and pedis--of course--PROSE has a special focus on wellness and using good-for-use products. From the way the utensils are sanitized to the polishes that lack icky ingredients to the cooling infused botanical that guests can sip during their treatment, PROSE takes great care in making sure clients have the ultimate feel-good treatment (in a beautiful, modern setting, to boot).

At PROSE, much thought has gone into the little details that make a big impact. For instance, the manicure stations have purse hooks and charging stations and the pedicure chairs are plush and comfy. And the friendly, talented staff really know their stuff when it comes to the healthful products.

Though PROSE offers a montly membership, first-time guests receive their mani-pedi combo for only $50--and now is the perfect time to gift Mom with the gift of pampering for Mother's Day. Click here to purchase a gift card.

PROSE memberships are $105 per month, which includes three services.
