

Q&A with Latina/Hip Hop Artist Abrina

Written by Stacia Affelt

Q: How did you get into hip hop music?
A: I started listening to hip hop when I was in middle school. I was always into music, but hip hop was the first genre that really resonated with me. I loved the lyrics and the beats.
Q: How did you get started as an artist?
A: I started writing lyrics when I was in high school. I would write about my life and my feelings. I started performing at school events and then at local venues.
Q: What inspired you to create your own music?
A: I was inspired by the hip hop artists I listened to. I wanted to express myself and my experiences through music. I wanted to be part of the culture.
Q: How do you feel about being a Latina artist in the hip hop industry?
A: It's a mix of pride and challenge. I'm proud to represent my community, but it can be challenging to break through in an industry that's often dominated by white artists.
Q: What advice do you have for aspiring artists?
A: Stay true to yourself. Don't try to be like everyone else. Find your own voice and stick to it. Also, be consistent and work hard. The industry is full of people who want to be famous, but few who are willing to put in the work.
