San Francisco Giant's starting pitcher Tim Lincecum is hitting a home run off the field with his recently listed 11,000-sq.-ft. Paradise Valley home.

Lincecum purchased the 2.5-acre home in 2012, which is selling for $4 million, and now it's time for another entertaining enthusiast to step up to the plate and enjoy a batting cage, a 3,000-sq.-ft. gym complete with a bar and basketball court, movie theater and pool nestled in the mountains.

In addition, the full-length windows give an exclusive view of the city and Camelback Mountains. And with limestone tile, a grand water feature in the dining room, designer appliances, wine storage, and guest quarters, the inside scores major style points as well.

With all-around patio access, it's convenient to create tasty cocktails for guests in the chef's kitchen and bring them outside for friends to enjoy while lounging poolside.

When it's time for a little rest and relaxation, there's no need to worry about being disturbed by others playing hoops or catching the latest movie. The two-story home has living spaces on the main level and entertaining space on the floor below, so you can decide where to spend your free time. The modern home has four bedrooms and six baths when it's time to wind down.

For the times you will want to leave the luxury living spaces, car lovers will find plenty of room to store their prized possessions with the extended four plus car garage.

Complete with an elevator and two gas fireplaces, including one in the master bedroom, the added features truly channel the sleek and sophisticated style of the home.
