

Daily Buzz- Our Favorite Summer Fragrance

Written by Claire Perkins

Wednesday, 19 August 2009 16:08 - Last Updated Wednesday, 19 August 2009 20:53

Smell This.

We're in the home stretch! Cooler weather is on the horizon. But there are still a few summer weeks left to make that escape. Literally, in the form of a last-minute trip, mentally at your desk or scentially in the form of KenzoAmour Eau de Toilette florale. KenzoAmour, our favorite fragrance ever, has been reworked into an unbelievable smell perfect for these last few weeks of summer.

This scent "initiates a new journey of love into the light with a feminine bouquet of delicate white blossoms." Inspired by journeys of falling in love and the smells one crosses in a journey across Asia, KenzoAmour Eau de Toilette florale is definitely a voyage we'd love to take. It starts off with beautiful top notes of neroli, grapefruit-black currant, and essence of cardamom, which unfold into a floral heart of frangipani blossom, rosebuds and gardenia- the base notes, white musk and cedarwood, truly last all day.

Luminous, clear and sensitive, the entire scope of notes is refreshing and delicate enough for warm weather, but spicy and interesting enough to distinguish itself from all the mindless sheer scents we've grown so accustomed to (and tired of!).

To top it off, the bottle is absolutely to die. Designed by style icon Karim Rashid, the sheer glass bottle is inspired by the sensuality of the female bod and the sense of being in flight.

Far, far away from triple-digit temperatures.

Available in 40 ml.($55) and 85 ml. ($75) sizes at Kenzousa.com.

August 19, 2009