Though long-sleeved wedding dresses have in the past been reserved for winter weddings, we are starting to see them all seasons of the year. Their elegance draws us in, and the lacy details sell us on this increasingly popular style.

Some dresses have full-length sleeves, while others have three-quarter lengths, providing even more options for the bride-to-be who digs this style.

Whether the lengths are three-quarters or full, many brides are turning to this style as a break from the strapless dress that requires a great deal of adjustments throughout the day.

We have scoured the internet for some of our favorite long-sleeved wedding dresses to inspire you. You may not have thought about a long-sleeved dress before, but the below dresses may change your opinion.

The Icarus Gown - Odylyne the Ceremony

This dress, called The Icarus Gown, is from Odylyne The Ceremony. Entirely hand-beaded and made out of silk and lace, this dress will wow you and your guests. The bell sleeves are a great addition, bringing even more personality to this stunning dress.

Tanya - Reem Acra

The Tanya dress (far right) has a unusual, yet gorgeous corset-like bodice that contrasts beautifully with the light and airy skirt. The sleeves of this dress are both off the shoulder and three-quarter length, providing a beautiful look that is far from average.

Marchesa took the concept of elegance a step further with this gown. The ultra-feminine touches to this dress, such as the plunging neckline, floral appliques, and ribbon belt make it feel incredibly elegant.

Polka Dot Guipure Lace Applique Sheer Ball Gown - Costarellos

If you're looking for a more unusual take on the long-sleeves trend, this dress from Costarellos is anything but normal. Between the polka dots, the transparent skirt, and the beautiful lace details, all eyes will definitely be on you with this dress.

Style 6600 Hayley - Hayley Paige

For those who are not into the white dress, this dress' color is a great alternative. With a tulle skirt and cathedral train, you will feel like a princess in this dress.
