Namesake of the Mary D. Fisher Theatre in Sedona (which happens to currently be hosting portions of the Sedona Film Festival), Mary Fisher has announced her newest project, the 100 Good Deeds Bracelets. The author, artist, advocate and social entrepreneur will launch the bracelets by March 9, also known as Good Deeds Day.

The bracelets are designed to encourage a worldwide movement for positive change. The intention is that every time a good deed is performed, the wearer can move the ring one bead closer to the "1GD" button--until all 100 deeds are completed. The collection was created by women in Africa and around the world.

Fisher will be joined by the latest celebrity ambassador of the 100 Good Deeds Bracelets, Susan Sarandon, at the Sedona Film Festival.
