Gift giving provides the opportunity to make a statement—and nothing speaks louder than tricked-out electronics.

What dad wouldn't want to receive a new blackberry or laptop this father's day? Add to that the possibility of gold-trimmed customizations and you've got a gift-giving recipe sure to please. Enter Stuart Hughes, a UK-based ingénue of all things jeweled. Hughes finds ways to accessorize and personalize the latest gadgets like no other before him. Featured here are a few of his latest designs, most of which are limited editions.

The MacBook Air 'Supreme Fire' Edition (pictured above), could easily be considered the most luxurious laptop in the world. The piece of art took 3 months to construct and is encrusted with 25.5 cts of 'I'F' Flawless diamonds. A total of 53 individually set sparkling gems sit beautifully in their solid 24ct gold Apple logo. The whole housing is made from highly polished solid 24ct gold, weighing in the region of 2,600 grams. This Exclusive Laptop brings together luxury and top of the industry technology, all of which result in an exquisite work of art. £219,995.

Diamond Blackberry 9700 Bold 2 Edition —The Blackberry Bold 2 just got bolder. Already one of the world's most established handsets but now with its own unique statement amongst the elite, in the arrangement of its own spectacular dressing which accommodate approx 6ct of beautifully set VVS1 diamonds in the front lower section and crafted Stainless steel rear, all of which give this handset a more conspicuous mode. £14,995.

Said to be the most expensive iPad in the world, The solid Platinum iPad Supreme Edition is the world's 1st solid Platinum and diamond iPad. Encrusted with 85.5 cts of 'I'F' Flawless diamonds, a total amount of 173 individually set sparkling gems sit beautifully on the skillfully crafted solid Platinum rear section which weighs in at a huge 2,700 grams. This iPad's appearance is dazzling even down to the precise polishing to reveal its most beautiful reflective appearance. A magnificent combination of top of the industry technology and unrivalled craftsmanship was involved in creating this masterpiece. The iPad is the Wi-Fi & 3G, 64GB and is a limited edition (only 5 units are to be made). £299,995.

The iPhone 3GS Chameleon Gold is the first iPhone with a complete bundle of the three most precious metal finishes. The iPhone itself comes in its standard full 18ct yellow gold appearance but Hughes offers as part of this purchase, the original Apple full housings & command buttons in an alternative finish of 20ct white gold & 18ct rose gold. The handset's versatility allows users to change its look to suit their style needs. The handset itself is 32GB, which has been officially unlocked to work on any network worldwide. £2,495.
