It's the most expensive home in Arizona and if it sells for the asking price of $35 million - it will set a state record. The photos speak for themselves that this 12- acre dream is more than a mansion. It's a PALACE.

The 31,000 square-foot main house itself boasts an indoor basketball court with an electric scoreboard and skybox, two elevators, and a hair salon.

This marble bathroom is one of 20 baths. Imagine coming home through the private gates into this paradise and relaxing in a bubble bath in the marble tub.

In fact, located with the mountain views of posh Paradise Valley (the Beverly Hills of the Phoenix area) - the home was named Villa Paradiso by owner Robert Sussman, President of a New York hedge fund company. He built this unique PALACE from 2000- 2005.

The home theater has its own lobby. There's also an art gallery which runs the length of the home. In addition to the maid's quarters, 12 garage spaces and 5 car ports, there's a 3 bedroom guest house with its own pool.

Upstairs, the master wing and secondary bedroom wing are connected by a stairway bridge. Catherine Jacobson of Walt Danley Realty has the listing with global support by Christies International.
